Communication is a key to Human Development

Here are some ideas to help your baby or toddler develop communications skills:

- 1) Respond to your baby's gestures, looks and sounds. Be Openly Affectionate.
- 2) Talk to the child and listen to them.
- 3) Help children build on their language skills. Play with Your Baby.
- 4) Read Together.
- 5) Teach your child about non-verbal communication. Encourage them to Explore.
- 6) Respect and recognize your child's feelings.
- 7) Allow your child to develop a "feelings" vocabulary.
- 8) Narrate what you do as you go through your daily routines.
- 9) Encourage pretend play.
- 10) Make requests clear, simple, and appropriate for your child's age and ability.
- 11) Be a good role model.

I can now express my thoughts

I can now Talk

I now have freedom of speech

I'm now able to speak my mind

Communication has 4 MAJOR ASPECTS:

Physical development, Cognitive development, Social-emotional development, Language development. Each aspect, while unique in its own, has much overlap with all other aspects.
